

WESTERN LAW REVIEW

Call for Reviewers

Dear Colleagues:

The newly founded Western Law Review (WLR) acknowledges that hard-working, dedicated editors and reviewers are one of the most important factors in its future success as a premier outlet for scholarly legal research. The WLR is the official publication of the Western Academy of Legal Studies in Business (WALSB), a regional association of the Academy of Legal Studies in Business (ALSB). To ensure that the WLR will provide high-quality feedback through its blind, peer-review process, the WLR is looking to expand its pool of reviewers. Please help us by volunteering to review for our inaugural issue!

If you are interested in reviewing for the WLR, simply e-mail the Editor-in-Chief at: westernlawreview21@gmail.com.

Include your preferred e-mail address and phone number as well as your list of subject area expertise (e.g., securities law, taxation, intellectual property law, employment law, ethics, contracts, business organizations, pedagogy, empirical legal studies, etc.).

We greatly appreciate the support and contributions of our esteemed ALSB and all of the regional associations' membership.

Sincerely,

John Paul, Founder & Editor-in-Chief of the Western Law Review
